

A portrait of Maurice Clarett, a Black man with short hair, smiling and looking slightly to the right. He is wearing a dark suit jacket over a light-colored collared shirt. The background is a blurred blue and white pattern.

THE SUPREME COURT of OHIO
Black History Month Celebration

SETTING TARGETS FOR YOUR LIFE

MAURICE CLARETT

Co-Founder, The Red Zone » Former OSU Running Back » Author » Justice Reform Advocate

Monday, Feb. 26 » 1 p.m.

Thomas J. Moyer
Ohio Judicial Center
65 South Front Street
Columbus, Ohio 43215-3431

Open to the public
at no charge.

RSVP by Feb. 20, 2018
to forum@sc.ohio.gov
or 614.387.9267

Visit supremecourt.ohio.gov for driving instructions and parking information.

Building guests must present
photo identification.

Maurice Clarett's success on the football field as a key member of the 2002 Ohio State national championship team was followed by struggles with drugs, alcohol, and a prison sentence for armed robbery. Then came a self-engineered redemption and his emergence as a civic leader in his hometown, Youngstown. Today, Clarett educates and empowers people to create goals and develop paths to a fulfilling life. He co-founded The Red Zone, a resource for those struggling with mental illness, drugs, alcohol, and housing issues. The Red Zone's purpose is to help people envision a better self and achieve goals they may have considered out of reach.

Maurice Clarett has traveled throughout the nation speaking to universities, high schools, businesses, non-profits, and faith-based organizations to relate his story of success, failure, and reinvention, and to help others place themselves on path to a productive life. Setting personal targets, and learning how to reach them, drives responsible, self-fulfilling behavior, he says.